In todays business climate, where innovation seems to be stifled at every turn, I find it appalling that xm radio and or other satelite radio stations are falling prey to possible government restrictions concerning broadcasting "local oriented" content. Any and I mean ANY media outlet should be encouraged to provide "local content". I would hope that govenment would encourage and not discourage this practice which would only encourage competition and thus "better content". The free market place of ideas we need more content and not less. I would also encourage xm radio to do "local oriented" material concerning public oriented programming that focuses on community issues such as raising awareness on local problems in a certain area like gang violence or teen pregnancy etc. Would it be the position of the NAB to restrict this type of "local oriented" programming?? I would hope not.
